

From the artist's corner . . . Lansing State Journal 11/29/96

Susan Hensel has won a place in a new juried art collection of works by artists being exhibited on CD-ROM. The publisher, Art Communication International, is a Philadelphia-based company that would like to change the way people acquire art by making it available on a computer CD-ROM drive and/or the Internet. Susan, an East Lansing artist, has two entries on the compact disk: "George's Banana" and "Letters of Obsession," both of which are original limited edition artist's books on handmade paper. Susan has her work in galleries and collections from New York to California. Her next scheduled Michigan show will be in South Haven next year.

Lansing State Journal 8/27/97 Her work selected for exhibit

Local artist Susan Hensel has been invited to share her work in The Artist Book, a juried exhibition at the Fine Art Center in Taos, N.M. The exhibition will open Sept. 8 during the 22nd annual Taos Fall Arts Festival. Susan also was invited to show her work in Steamboat Springs, Colo., again this year.

Artist Susan Hensel won a place in a juried art collection of works by contemporary artists exhibited on CD-ROM as a result of international search. The publisher, Art Communication International, is a Philadelphia high-technology company that makes original contemporary art available to everyone with access to a computer CD-ROM drive or the Internet.

Hensel

Works included in the collection by Hensel, 45, were "George's Banana" and "Letters of Obsession," both original artist's books on handmade paper. In March Hensel taught workshops in Santa Fe, N.M. Recuros de Santa Fe, a nonprofit educational organization.

Hensel was raised in Ithaca and graduated from Ithaca High School in 1968.

Items for this column should be addressed to: Local People, The Ithaca Journal, 123 W. State St., Ithaca, NY 14850. 4/97

Artist Susan Hensel won a place in a juried art collection of works by contemporary artists exhibited on CD-ROM as a result of international search. Works included in the collection by Hensel, 45, were "George's Banana" and "Letters of Obsession," both original artist's books on handmade paper.

In March Hensel taught workshops in Santa Fe, N.M. Recuros de Santa Fe, a nonprofit educational organization, with the aid of the Edith Lambert Gallery, organized the event.

Hensel graduated from Ithaca High School in 1968. Ithaca Journal 4/16/97

Alma launches art show, more

The Alma College arts scene is stirring back into action today. Tonight, it has an art-show opening and a lecture. Coming up this month are three poets, a pianist, tap-dancers and more.

The art show features Anne McCauley's drawings and print-making, plus works by Susan Hensel, whose artwork takes the form of small books. That opens at 7 p.m. today in the Beck Gallery, with a lecture by Hensel at 8 p.m.

Other events are in the Heritage Center at 8 p.m. Pianist Yakov Kasman is Jan. 14 and the group called Especially Tap Chicago is Jan. 26, with tickets at (517) 463-7304. Free shows include faculty musicians Raymond Riley and Kristina Belisle (Jan. 23) and three poets — Grace Cavalieri (Jan. 13), Patricia Smith (Jan. 20) and Anne Caston (Jan. 28). LST 11/5/98

Local artist exhibits in Nebraska

Original artwork on and of paper by local artist Susan Hensel is now on exhibit at the Chadron State College Fine Art Gallery in Nebraska.

Also prominent in the display are Susan's literary sculptures. She describes the sizable pieces as responses to the biography and work of selected authors. Each sculpture required up to two years of research, she said.

The show will run through March 31. 3/25/98 Lansing State Journal